

The Death of Liholiho and Kamamalu

hmsjenny - Once there was a king and a queen that ruled Oahu and were never mean. Their names were Liholiho and Kamamalu, the couple was harmed with measles. Soon, Kamamalu died on July 8th, people tried to save her, but it was too late.

hmsmarim - A physician spoke of the king's firmness but the effect of his illness was worthless. The death of his loved one left him speechless, and he also lost his uniqueness.

hmsjenny - Within a week, Liholiho was too, dead. Although there was no blood that was red, he died when he was laying in bed. News of the king's death has been brought to Honolulu.

hmsmarim - A memorial service was held in Christian Churches. After the king's death and burial, the Hawaiians were very ill. The Missionaries and the Congregational Church grew more important.

hmsjenny - The church was opposed by foreign traders, and the news about the king and queen became fainter.

hmsmarim - By the end of the year, most of the Hawaiian chiefs were congregational members, but King Liholiho and Queen Kamamalu will always be remembered.